

AN ENQUIRY INTO THE ORIGIN OF THE CHEROKEES,
IN A LETTER TO A MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT.

— posse diversarum Vocabula Nationum transferre sub Etymologiis suis, & singula Vitia singulis Nominibus coaptare. Hieronymus, Comm. in Jeremiam c. 25. v. 26.

OXFORD,

Printed at the THEATRE for James Fletcher in the Turl: and sold by J. Fletcher in St. Paul's Church-Yard, LONDON. MDCCLXII.

Imprimatur,

J O. B R O W N E,

Vice-Can. O x o n.

Oct. 12. 1762.

SIR,

YOU may remember, that being at your Table, when the publick Papers gave us the Account of the Cherokee Chiefs having been presented to his Majesty; and the Question being asked, What the Name Cherokee imported; I hastily answered, “It means, I suppose, the “painted Indian; and by this Mark I judge him “to be a Descendent of Meshek; and suppose upon “Enquiry he will be found to be more nearly allied to the old Britons, than we suspect him “to be.”

It could not be expected that a Declaration, seemingly so whimsical, would be received but in the pleasant manner it was by You and your Company: and yet upon maturer Thoughts, I found it probable, that I might not have been greatly mistaken; and that my Conjecture was not altogether unworthy of a more serious Consideration. I acquainted you afterwards, that I would take some Pains in examining further what I had said, and would lay before you the Result of my Enquiry: which I shall now do in the following sheets.

The Article in the London Evening Post of Sat. July 10th, ran thus, “Thursday the Cherokee King and his two Chiefs “had their first Admittance to his Majesty ——

“ They are Men of middling Stature, seem to have “ no Hair upon their Heads, and wear a Kind of “ Skull Cap: their Faces and Necks are so be“ smear’d with a coarse sort of Paint of a Brick-“ dust Colour, that it is impossible to say of what “ Complexion they are; their Necks are streak’d “ with blue Paint, something resembling Veins in “ a fine Skin.”

What those Circumstances are in this Account, which induced me to suppose, that the Cherokees are descended from Meshek a Son of Japhet, I shall point out, as I go along: and the Principle I shall proceed upon to prove a Sameness of Origin is a Similitude of Manners; in such striking and important Particulars, as may be reasonably judg’d to be peculiar to Meshek’s Family. For the present undisguis’d Simplicity of the Cherokees and other American Nations offer us the fairest Opportunity of ascertaining the Origin of each with a Degree of Certainty; and some learned Men have in fact attempted to do this, as you will presently see.
 However I must confess, that my Enquiry has been much narrowed by the little Information I have had of the Cherokee’s Customs; and all I have to do is to set down such Customs, as obtained among the Descendants of Meshek; whereby you will judge, how far the latter comport with the former, and what kind of Proof that Agreement is of their being one and the same People.

But before I attempt to prove a Similitude of Manners between the Cherokees and the Sons of Meshek; I find it necessary to evince the leading Principle, on which I promised to proceed, and to shew what Reasons I have to infer a Sameness of Origin from a Likeness of Manners; and how those Manners, which may be reasonably judg’d peculiar to a Family, may be discern’d and ascertain’d.

As

1. As to my first Point, it is evident to me, that there are certain NOTÆ GENTILITIÆ or Family Marks, which were intended to distinguish, and for ever to keep separate the three Sons of Noab and their Descendents, who are recorded in Gen. 10. to have peopled the whole Earth. These are those Marks, by which Moses tells us they were divided after their Families: where the Word he uses [פֶּרֶד] has a very significant Meaning, denoting such a Difference, as should make it impossible for them to mix and blend together; such a Distinction of Nature, as there is between the several Species of Creatures, which cannot be cross'd; but though they mix with Creatures of another Sort, yet no third Being can be propagated by the other two: Hence the same Word is the Hebrew Name for a Mule; which, though it be the Issue of the Horse and Ass, yet hath no Power to raise a new Species like to itself. In like manner, tho' divers Individuals all over the World mix and incorporate with different People, and in length of Time assimilate themselves to the Ways and Manners of those, with whom they sojourn; yet these Mules^a will never raise a People of a third Sort compounded of the other two. ——— In great Knowledge, says the Son of Sirach; Ecclus. 33. 11. the Lord hath divided, repeating Moses's Word, the Sons of Adam, and hath made their Ways divers. These Words shew us by whom, and in what manner this Division was made; the LORD made their Ways divers: and as this Diversity of Ways and Manners was intended to help us in dividing or separating the various Families of Mankind; may not the Sameness of Manners be judg'd a safe and unerring Rule for tracing out the same Family? or, in other Words, if the Ways of each Family were made by the God of Nature divers, and what he then made was designed to put a Mark of Difference between that Family and all others; should we not avail ourselves of this Information, and agree that there are certain Notes and Characters, which distinguish one People from another, and which, carefully attended to, may enable us to distinguish them? Yes, Sir, they will; even through the Number of Ages that are since past, and the manifold Contingencies of Life, which conspire to confound them.

^a Cyrus is called by the Oracle the Mule-King, Herodot. l. 1. p. 22. because his Father was a Persian, and his Mother a Mede.

For the Mark of Difference, the Nota Gentilitia, as I term it, which the God of Nature has stamp'd, must be indelible; it will for ever operate, and in the same uniform Manner, though not in the same Degree, on the Passions and Inclinations of Mankind: and so we are assured it will be found to have done at the final consummation of all Things by the God of Nature himself. For when his Prophet Ezekiel tells us, that in the last Day, certain Sons of Japhet shall combine to annoy and distress Mankind; and that among these Meshek, Chap. 38. 2. shall arise, I am not at Liberty to doubt, whether this Family shall not then exist; or whether it will not be divided, as it was at first, from the other Families of the Earth. And though I ingenuously own there are sundry Reasons, which make it difficult to account, How the Difference, first put between the Sons of Noah, should be preserved through the strange and manifold Vicissitudes of the World; yet I submit my own Judgment, and without great Difficulty, to this express Declaration of Scripture; and because I truly believe, that Meshek's Family will remain, and be found to be distinct from from other Families, therein mention'd by the Prophet, at the End of Time, I shall therefore take the more Pains to find out, as well as I am able, his present Abode.

2. How this Nota Gentilitia, or Family-Mark, may be descried and ascertain'd is the other Point to be consider'd. And the Rule I venture to lay down for this Purpose, is a careful Attention to the several Imports and Meanings of NOMINIS GENTILITII the Family Name. For what Mr. Bochart^b says of Ham's Name, that it was not given him sine Numine, without the Spirit of Prophecy, is as true of all the other Names that are set down in Gen. 10. they are all expressive and declaratory of the Genius and Temper, the Occupation and Manners of their respective Owners; sometimes also of their Situation, and the Produce of it. I have moreover the surer Word of Scripture for affirming of Meshek, as well as any other Patriarch, that as is his Name, so is He, 1 Sam. 25. 25. and the Authority of that will also justify me — in laying as great a stress, as I shall want to put, on Meshek's Name — in calling in to my Assistance likewise such Words, as bear a distant Affinity to his true Name, or even sound only like it — in giving not only one but many Etymologies, and those too of contrary and opposite Senses^c of the same Name — lastly, in asserting that a Change of the Name for another of the same Import, makes no Alteration in fact; that the same Family is intended under each, whether they are call'd Moschi, Macrones or Cherokees; as well as the same Persons, under the different Appellations of Jerubbaal and Jerubboseth, Peter and Cephas, Esau and Seir.

^b Phaleg. l. 4. c. 1. ^c Zebulon's Name is evidently fetch'd from two different Words, from זֶבֶן, because God had endowed Leah with a good Dowry; and from זָבַל for her Husband would now dwell with her. And Joseph's from two Words not only of different Letters, but of opposite Senses, יָסַף & אָסַף, because, said Rachel, God hath taken away my Reproach, and he shall add to me another Son. Gen. 30.

3. Meshek was the Son of Japhet. From hence it follows, that, if the Cherokees are descended from him, we may without Hesitation determine a Question, which your Paper doth not, and precisely know of what Complexion they are: They are White Men. For the three Sons of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japhet, have left an indelible Mark on their respective Children; by which they are discriminated at this Day from one another; a Mark imported in their own d Names, and pointing out their Descent by their different Complexions of Black, Sallow, or Mulatto, and White. You see, Sir, the Hazard I run at my first setting out; for if the Cherokees are Mulattoes, i. e. of a fallow Complexion like the Jew or Turk, then are they not the Offspring of Meshek; and all, I shall say hereafter, will just come to nothing. All the Sons of Japhet are Europeans, i. e. Whites; for the last Appellation is an Explanation e of their Father's Name; and means the same Thing; whence it appears, that Japhet has the Honour of leaving his Name, thus obscured, to our Quarter of the World; as his Son Javan hath in a Greek Word, f of the same

d אדום adustus, שחום fuscatus, & יפת תואר candidus ore. Hence the saying of Abulfaragius, cited in Notis variorum of Sulp. Severus L. 1. p. 18. Noa dedit Hamo regionem nigrorum, Semo fuscorum & Japheto rubrorum. Hence Mahomet, the Mulatto, denounced War against the Blacks and Reds.

e אור or אפס Europa, as Mr. Bochart, lucidus ore.

f "Αἷς, which is the Greek word for πη Mud or Dirt, "Αἷς τῷ Ἰάπετῳ, as Apollodorus calls him, which may stand for Javan the Son of Japhet; though the Mythologist, I confess unluckily, transforms him into the other Sex, and calls him the Wife. Mr. Bochart offers another Conjecture.

Import

Import to Asia ; and these two, the finest Quarters of the known World, falling to the Lot of Japhet and his Sons, and being denominated from them, fully evince in what ample manner the Prediction of Noah hath been fulfill'd, that God would enlarge the Border of Japhet : and more fully still, when we come to consider how great a Part of America hath been peopled by his Descendents.

Mr. Bochart with great Probability directs us, where we may find Meshek, and survey his Manners ; having placed him and his Brother Tubal at Pontus, the eastern Parts of Japhet's Lot ; which at first lay between Taurus (Judith 2. 22.) and the Isles of the Sea, or the Sea of Islands, the Ægean g Sea : And in that space we must certainly look for the first Settlement of all Japhet's Sons. This may surprize you, Sir ; and you may possibly ask me, “ If Meshek was settled at Pontus, how should any “ of his Sons pass over into America ; or how can “ the Cherokee Americans be descended from him ? ” I answer, learned Men have enabled me to account for this very well ; having found out two Passages for these Asiatics into America, either by the Streights of Anien, as Mr. Bochart h and Others suppose ; or from Norway through Iceland, as Mr. Grotius i rather believed. But these Gentlemen give us very little Help in discovering, who the first Inhabitants of North America were : the former calls them Scythians, the latter Natives of Norway. However Dr. Edw. Bernard is more precise and exprefs, g Hence it took it's Name, Ægean, I think,  "X, tho' Mr. Bochart gives other Etymologies.

h Phaleg. L. 3. c. 1.

i Omnes ferme Populos, qui cis Isthmum sunt Panamae, ex Norwagiâ ortos arbitror. Dissert. de origine Gentium American. — 1642.

telling us that the Inhabitants of Norway as well as all the northern Nations of Europe are the Descendants of the Cappadocians, Colchans, &c. and these of Mesbek, Tubal and Magog.^k It is strange that the learned Professor forgot to join Tiras with the other Brothers; who, I dare venture to say, gave Birth to the more warlike and savage Americans. But be this as it may; the Use I shall make of these Opinions is this, that if they have their weight, it is very easy for me to make out a Title for Mesbek to a Settlement in these Parts; and if I place him among the Cherokees, in particular, I shall give you my Reasons for so doing.

4. But to examine the Merit of these, you must be contented to take a Trip with me over to Pontus, and behold the Sons of Mesbek in their antient Dress; and to survey their Manners, in that Part of the World. And let me premise that the Import of the Name will sometimes inform us, what Kind of Situation the Bearer of it chose; and not only where but in what manner we may expect to find his Sons dwelling together. Thus for instance a Sun-burnt inland Country well suited with Gomer's Name; which being called Phrygia and Cimmeria, express'd the excessive Heat of the Situation, at the same time that it retained the Name of its first Inhabitant. In like Manner the Meaning of Javan's Name directs us to look for him in the low and fenny Parts, on the Banks of Hermus, Meander and Caystrus. And in general the Patronymics ending in im, as Mizraim &c. are not to be called plural Nouns, as some very learned Men suppose, but mean that they, to whom such Names are given, should settle on the Sea-Coast, or in a watry Soil: Hence we find all the Sons of Mizraim to have Names, ending as their Father's, and not one of the Sons of Gomer. Meshek's Situation also patly comports with his Name;¹ for we find him spreading himself along the Ridge of Mountains, called from him, Montes Moschici, the Hills of Meshek; and his Family, as Mr. Bochart observes, may properly be stiled in the Words of Isaiah 18. 2. a People meted out or extended; and therefore some of them were furnamed Macrones, the long-extended People; while others of them, who lived in the Valleys, were dispersed in Villages, consisting perhaps of a few Hutts only, placed, as Xenophon says of some of them, at the Distance of 80 Furlongs or more. This Observation,^m trifling as it may seem, was not so in its Consequence; for this loose and 1 מִשֵּׁךְ Judg. 4. 6. &c is used of a Company of Men, who draw out, extend, and spread themselves; and בֶּן מִשֵּׁךְ Gen. 15. 2. is Filius Discursoris, a bustling, busy Servant. Apollo-nius describes L. 2. v. 1018. the Mossynæci in the same manner, ἀν' ὄρεα ναίεσθαι, and the Cherokees are said, “to inhabit among the Mountains, from whence the River Savannah descends.

^k Has denique Gentes sparserunt & Mosoches & Thobelus & Magoges, tot Incrementa Japeti. In his Pref. to his Etymol. Brit. publish'd with Dr. Hickes's Institutiones Anglo Sax.

^m Phaleg. L. 3. c. 12. גִּזְרֵי מִשֵּׁךְ Gens tracta, s. in longum extensa. The Prophet is supposed to speak there of Egypt, the Land מַצֵּל כּוֹפֵס, which I presume may be render'd limosa Oras, the fenny Coasts. And it must be deem'd a Master Piece of Joseph's good Policy, and wise Administration, that he removed this scattered and divided People into Cities, Gen. 47. 21. i. e. form'd them into Bodies politic; and so became in fact the Instituter of the Egyptian Νομοὶ or Principalities. This, I presume, is the true Meaning of Moses in this strangely perverted Text. For עָבַר in Hiphil is used for a Shepherd's gathering his Flock into the Fold; and the Hebrew עָר answers to the Latin Civitas; the five Cities of the Philistines signifying their five States or Principalities; a Form of Government, which they borrow'd from their Kinsmen the Egyptians. This Act of Joseph answers to that, which Plutarch styles the godlike Act of Theseus; and his Words συνέταξε εἰς ἐν Ἄστυ, and Cicero's The-sens strolling Way of Life was the Means of keeping them more disunited from, and less dependent on, each other; and in Fact we find them a vague and desultory People; without those Connexions, that are necessary to constitute Society; bandying in Parties, and each Party keeping itself divided from the rest; and so Mesbek's Sons come down to us under the manifold Denomination of Mossynæci and Moschi, Macrones, and Byzares, Bechires, Sapires and Tzanii, and of Scythini also, a Derivative from the last Syllable of their Father's Name; and which afterwards gave Rise to a like Appellation, by which they are now better known.

5. For Mesbek or Mosbek is the Scythian,ⁿ in that restrained sense, wherein a Scythian means one who dwelleth in Tents, or in Carts, or, as did some of Mesbek's Sons, in wooden Cages, and Towers. The Name is given indeed to many other Families, which differ'd from Mesbek's not only in this, but many other material Circumstances; a Scythian meaning any one, who was an Inhabitant of the immense Regions of Tartary, in the general Sense seus Atticos migrare ex agris, & in Astu omnes se conferre jussit, are a better Translation of Moses's Words, than that which the Greek Versions give.

ⁿ The Name Scythæ is, I suppose, a contraction of Succothæ, or Scothotæ; as Scythopolis is rightly conjectured by Mr. Reland in his Palæstina illust. to stand for Succothopolis; and both of them from תד or תד a Tent. Herodotus says, that the Scythæ were first called Scholotæ, which perhaps is a false spelling for the former Name Scothotæ. Remarkable it is, that the several Branches of Mesbek's Family, whilst they remain'd in Asia, are called Scythians; as the Mossunes by Hesychius; the Macrones by Apollonius's Scholiast. L. 2. l. 394. and the Sapires l. 397. This Name extends to all the various Clanns of Scythians, however distinguish'd by Strabo L. 11. p. 492. and is that Family Mark, among others, whereby I oppose them to the Thracians, the Sons of Tiras, with whom they are generally confounded.

of

of that Word, in which certainly the most learned Bochart is to be understood, when he says that North America was first peopled by the Scythians. But I suppose that all the Sons of Meshek were not Scythians, i. e. Dwellers in Tents, &c. the Name is appropriated to those Tribes and Branches of his Family, who made this sense of their Father's Name the Note and Characteristic of their Family. Meshek then, according to this Etymology of his Name, is the Father of them that dwell in Tents; and this in the Scripture Use means those, that tend and feed Cattle, Gen. 4. 20. Thus Moses characterises Jacob, he was a plain Man dwelling in Tents, Gen. 25. 27. which he afterwards explains, Chap. 46. 34. and 47. 3. A Man of Cattle, whose Trade and Occupation it had been from his youth to tend Flocks and Herds; or to till the Ground, and grow Corn, as Isaac did, Gen. 26. 12.

It is confess'd, That this Way of living common as it was to many other People, will not distinguish the Sons of Meshek, without some other Note. The Arabian Scenitæ, and the African Nomades were Scythians too; but the former, if the Sons of Cush, as Mr. Bochart supposes P. L. 4. c. 2. or of Ishmael; and the latter the Sons of Phut, are easily discriminated from Meshek's Posterity by their Complexion; and if these last were the only Family of the Line of Japhet, who were Dwellers in Tents, then may they be mark'd out and separated by this Character; and the white or European Scythian will mean in particular a Son of Meshek. But, studious as every Family always was of preserving a faithful Remembrance of their Descent, and transmitting it by certain Marks to their Posterity, if the foremention'd Appellation doth not sufficiently particularize the Sons of Meshek, we may be sure of finding other Circumstances in their Manners, that that will. And there is one, which offers itself to us, that will distinguish Meshek and his Sons most effectually.

6. For he is a Piēt, or the painted° Man; be-smear'd, just as the Cherokees are reported to have been, with what our Version, in the Text I have cited, calls Vermilion, but the Hebrew Word signifies a kind of Oker, with which the Antients were wont to paint their Ships; of a dusky Red, call'd sometimes Sinopis, from the Town Sinope in Meshek's Neighbourhood, because the Oker exported from thence was accounted, says Strabo, p. 540. the best. Xenophon, who was an Eye-witness of what he relates, informs us in what manner the Mossynæci [so named from the wooden Houses in which they dwelt; for they were Scythians or Sce-nitæ] were painted; telling us “that the Children “of Note and Fashion, being well fed with boil'd “Chesnuts, were plump and very fair, and almost “as fat as long, being painted on the Back, and “mark'd or streak'd before like Flowers.”^p However this Custom was not confined to the Children;

ו בששׁר כושׁו כושׁו Jer. 22. 14. painted with Vermilion, It was this Circumstance in the Cherokee's Dress, that induced me to call them the Sons of Meshek; but whether they name themselves Cherokees, for this Reason, I cannot say. In a following Note I shall assign another Etymology of their Name; on which, however, I lay no stress, though I am perswaded that very many Words in the northern Languages are of Hebrew Original.

ρ Ποικίλος δὲ τὰ νῶτα, ἢ τὰ ἔμπροσθεν πάντα ἐσιγμένους ἀνθέμιον. Learned Men differ in explaining the last Word ἀνθέμιον but whereas Hesychius says, χαμμή τις ἐλικθεδὴς ἢ ἐν τοῖς κίονι, it was a Line or Streak, winding like Ivy in Pillars, i. e. like the Vein in Stone or Marble, I may avail myself of this Particular in the manner or way of painting, wherein they and the Cherokees agree, though I confess the word ποικίλοι, which implies a variety of Colours, doth not correspond with the Indian Practice.

for

for Diodorus^r assures us, that they were all so painted from their Infancy; and other Authors agree thereto, as may be seen in Dr. Hutchinson's Notes on Xenophon's Anabasis.

Here are two Circumstances, Sir, which you will discern, wherein these Descendents of Meshek agree with the Cherokees in the Manner of painting themselves: they both use more than one sort of Paint; and on the Forepart of the Body, they are both scor'd and streak'd in Lines, drawn out in Length [alluding perhaps in this particular to their Father's Name] resembling the Veins in Marble, or the human Body. It is true, this Method was not observed by all the Sons of Meshek, who painted themselves; every Tribe or Clan did this according to it's own Will, and in such a Way as might distinguish it from the rest. Some of them stain'd their Hair and Body with a blue Paint;^s others again prick'd the Marks upon the Flesh with a Needle;^t others moreover put the Paint not on the Body but their Clothing; which some of them made of the Bark of Trees, and others of the Skins of Beasts: nor was the Quantity of Paint used always the same; but among some of them, every Man was painted either more or less according to his Rank and Quality.^u But as these different Ways of painting, preserved uniformly by ^r Ἀπαντας δ' ἐκ παιδὸς σίγμασι τόντε νῶτον καὶ τὰ στήθη μεταπείποικίλθαι. L. 14. p. 413.

^s So A. Marcellinus says of the Agathyfi, interstincti sunt colore cæruleo, corpora simul & crines. L. 31. c. 2. The blue Colour, with which these and others were painted, answers to the Wood of the old Britons.

^t Εποίκιλλον τὰ Σώματα πείροναι, τὴν γραφὴν ἐνείσαν. Athenæus L. 12. p. 524.

^u Humiles quidem minutis atque raris, nobiles verò latis fucatis & densioribus notis, ibid. Marcellinus ubi supra.

the same Branches of Meshek's Family, distinguish'd one from the other ; so all and each of them by this Rite, confess'd themselves to be the Sons of Meshek, by what Names soever they were called, and which were assumed perhaps from the Family way or manner of painting themselves, or from some other Custom peculiar to each. And I should not be surprized to be told, that the Chickasaws and Creeks or Ufchesees, who are Neighbours to the Cherokees, are painted too ; and if they be, then we may expect that each of them have some other Family Mark, which is peculiar to themselves, and by which they perhaps are denominated, and known. For so we find the Cherokees to have ; and it is the Mark, on which I lay the greater Stress, because it is that, I presume, from which they take their Name.

7. The Cherokee is not only the painted, but the SHORN OR BALD-PATED^w Indian, having no hair on his Head, and wearing a Kind of Skull Cap, as says the Evening-Post : another material and glaring Proof of their Scythian Origin. For the Cherokee, under this Form, is the very Man, whom Sopho-

^w קרוחיים Keruchees [for so I would write the Name] shorn, or bald pated. This will give the Man the Appearance of being μακροκέφαλος, Capito, longheaded ; as the Macrones are said to have been by the Scholiast on Apollonius R. L. i. v. 1024. In this Sense the Name Keruchees answers to the Family Name Moschi, and is of the same Import, if we fetch the last from מושק rescuit ; a Sense, which, I am well informed, the Verb still retains in Arabic, and perhaps the Noun מושק has not lost in Hebrew. The Lexicons give us no Account, how this Word comes to signify Exitus, or Siccitas, as Schindler expounds it in voce חרול ; but if we deduce it from the above mention'd Root, and translate it Resectio or Locus ressecandis Urticis, it will well suit the Prophet's Meaning, Zeph. 2, 9. Surely Moab shall be as Sodom ; and the Children of Ammon as Gomorrah, מושק חרול ומברה מלח Resectio Urticarum, & Effossio Salis, a Place for cutting Nettles and for digging Salt.

cles

cles describes, having the Head shorn, and wearing a Skull Cap, after the SCYTHIAN fashion. The two learned Rabbies, R. Salomon and A. Ezra, differ in their Opinion concerning the Import of the Hebrew Word, from whence I deduce the Cherokees Name; the former supposing it to mean the shaving of the Forepart only; the latter of the whole Head. Let the Practice of the Cherokees determine this Point; though I am inclined to think it means only the Forepart; for when Theseus had thus cut the Hair of his Head, Plutarch tells us, that this was done after the manner of the Abantes; who are known to have let their Hair grow behind; and who being a Colony of the Thracians, or rather Scythians, did so after their Country-Fashion, as Eustathius notes. ^x

A Custom so singular as this, must owe its Rise to an adequate Cause; and the steady and persevering observance of it, through so many Ages, must be ascribed to the great Strefs and Weight, which was laid upon it at it's first Institution; especially since it is notorious, that shaving a Part of the Head only was very antiently inflicted as a Mark of Infamy and Disgrace; and that the Term semirasi is a known Epithet of Slaves. ^y Such indeed the Scythian was usually esteem'd, and we find him opposed to the free Man by St. Paul, Col. 3. 11. For he was often sold for such, even by his own Countrymen; and Meshek is recorded by Ezekiel, c. 27. 13. to have brought his Slaves to the Market of Tyre, as his Sons do at this day perhaps to the European Merchants. And for this Reason we may be assured, that the Cherokees have some other Meaning in retaining this Practice ; since it is absurd to suppose with Clearchus in Athenæus,^a that this Custom was first imposed upon them by way of Punishment and Disgrace, when we find it universally observed by their Posterity in different Parts of the World. And, I believe, you, Sir, will conclude with me, that the Practice of shaving Slaves, who were not Scythians by Nation, is a Proof that the Scythians were shaven on another Account ; and, whereas the Slave was semirafus, half-shorn, that the Tonsura Scythica, the Scythian Tonsure, was only in part ; on the Forehead, after the Fashion of the Abantes. — In imitation of the Scythian Custom of marking and staining their Bodies, it became usual also to brand and stigmatize Slaves ; but in Defiance of the perverse and discouraging Turn the Antients gave to this Scythian Practice also, the Scythians still esteem'd it a Note of Gentility to be so mark'd, and mean and base to be otherwise.^b And their resolute Adherence to both these Customs of painting their Bodies and shaving their Heads, notwithstanding the Endeavours of Mankind to shame them out of them ; and the infua L. 12. p. 524.

^x Notes on Dionysius P. 1. 520.

^y Frontes literati, capillum semirasi, & pedes annulati. Apuleius L. 7.

b Οἱ Εὐρωπαῖοι θρόνες εἴζονται, κελύοντες εὐχρὸς μὲν τὸ ἐσθλόν, ἀγρὸς δὲ τὸ αἰσχυρόν. Eustathius in Dionysium P. l. 322. He confounds the Thracian with the Scythian, as others do. —
 “ The Tungut Tartars stain their Forehead, Cheeks and Chin
 “ with a Thread steep'd in black Grease ; which leaving a Mark “ behind it [i. e. in Streaks, as was observed in Note p] they “ think is extremely beautiful.” Mr. Isbrant's Account of his Journey from Moscow to China, pag. 395. at the End of Mr.
Mottley's Hist. of Peter I. These Tartars are of the Family of Meshek, I presume ; nor is this the only Mark they bear of Me- shek's Sons ; for being used to remove, p. 397. and to shift their Habitations, which are Cabbins made of Bark, they prove themselves to be a Tribe of the ancient Scythians : and if they shave the Head, as some of the Tartars are said to do, then they agree with the Cherokees in another Rite.

mous Purposes they applied them to; perswades me that something more is meant and intended by these Customs, than is generally thought: that they are the Notæ Gentilitiæ, the Marks of their Family and Descent, by which they have stood distinguish'd through the Length of Time from all other People; and by which they were determin'd to distinguish themselves.

For the Scythians, Sir, were extremely tenacious of their own Customs, and watchfull over every Attempt that was made to introduce among them the Customs of foreign Nations, and even those of other Scythians.^c An Instance of their strict Observance of their Family Rites is given us by Diodorus, in what he says of the Macrones upon their entring into a Treaty of Alliance with the Grecians under Xenophon. This they did by the exchange of a Spear, giving the Grecians one made after their manner, and accepting from them another of the Grecian sort: adding, that this Rite had been transmitted to them by their Ancestors, as the strongest Pledge of Faith they could give.^d And if their Ancestors had thought it necessary to prescribe Rules to their Family in Points so unimportant, and their Posterity are found to have paid so precise and religious a Regard to those Rules, we cannot doubt either of their Ancestors Care in laying down Directions in Matters of greater Moment, or of their Posterity's Obedience thereto. They would not fail, for instance, of acquainting their Children with their Origin and Descent; or of establishing certain Customs, which might preserve a faithful and obvious Remembrance thereof to latest Ages. And in fact it appears, that the several Nations of the Earth were able to ascertain and deduce their Pedigree from their respective Founders: we find them often asserting their Genealogy, and contending with one another for the Priority of Existence; which they could not have done without an authentic Tradition and Memorial of their Descent. It was not without reason, that the Scythians, the Sons of Meshek, maintained against the Egyptians, the Sons of Mizraim, that they were the more antient People; for Meshek was the Son of Japhet, the eldest Son of Noah, and Mizraim the Son of Ham, who was the youngest. And the seemingly absurd Pretences, which some of them made to magnify their high Antiquity, are evident Proofs that they knew their own Original. For when the Egyptians asserted, that Mankind was generated, from the Slime and Mud of the River Nile, they meant nothing else than that all Mankind descended from their Father Mizraim.^c And the Athenian confronted this Pretence with another equally just, and as truly founded; for in styling themselves the Sons of Earth, they confessed themselves to be the Descendents of Javan. And if the Athenian, ornamenting his Hair with golden Grasshoppers, intended this as a Badge of Honour, and a Mark of his Family, and herein boasted of being a Son of the Earth, i. e. of Javan; I may venture to say on the same Principle that the Cherokee, c אֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם Agger s. Terra effossa & aggesta Maris. מִצְרַיִם Mæon, i. e. a Javane s. Luto oriundus; seu Terræ filius. So Maxitay and Μαίχαγες, are the Sons of Chittim and Carians or Strangers. And the Name Macar, and Macaria given to many Islands, denotes that they were first occupied by the Carians; who were Pirates and Freebooters: hence the Proverb אֵל מַלְאָגִים, May you fall into the Hands of the Carians.

^c Ξεινιοῖσι δὲ νομαίοισι ἢ ἔτοι αἰνῶς χρεῶν φεύγουσι, μήτοι γε ἂν ἀλλήλων. Herodotus L. 4. 281. see also p. 284.

^d Πρὸς πῖσιν παρὰ μὲν ἐκείνων λόγῃν ἔλαβον βαρβαρικὴν, αὐτοὶ δὲ ἑλληνικὴν ἔδωκαν. ταῦτά γὰρ ἔφασαν αὐτοῖς οἱ βαρβαροὶ ὅτι Προγόνων παρεδεδότῃ πρὸς πῖσιν βεβαιόταται. L. 4. p. 412.

wearing a Skull-Cap & painting his Face, has the same Thing in View, i. e. to own himself to be a painted and bald-pated Scythian, the Descendent of Meshek, Perhaps it may be found, and I suspect it will be, that Religion has now some Share in these Customs, and that these simple Institutions of their Ancestors have been since abused by their Posterity to superstitious Purposes. We have already seen, that the Mossynæci were all painted from their Infancy; and perhaps this was done, when the Infant was first initiated into their religious Rites. Such however was the antient Practice of cutting the Hair of adult Persons; such likewise was the Design of the Arabian Tonsure, a Ceremony used by that People in honour of Bacchus, as Herodotus informs us in his first Book, I think. And if Religion hath given it's Sanction to either, or both Customs of the Cherokees, and they are now practised by them as religious Rites, the first and original Design, intended in their Institution, is still promoted, and the Observance of them bound upon the Cherokees by stronger Ties. By them they are still divided not only from other Families, but from the several Branches also of their own: and these Rites are to be considered by us in a higher Light than that of Dress and Habit; they are the discriminating Notes of the Cherokee's RELIGION.

8. And these are the surest Marks we can follow in tracing out the Origin of a People; for religious Customs are most lasting, and less liable to Change or Innovation. It is true, the Scythians by their singular Abstinence, Integrity and Simplicity of Life, long retained the primitive Customs and Manners of their Family in other Respects; and Strabo ascribes this to their abstaining from all Commerce or

or Traffick for the sake of Gain. ^f We may hope therefore that the present State of the Cherokee Nations will furnish us with sundry other Circumstances, in civil or social Life, to paint the Likeness, I have endeavoured to draw between them and the Scythians, in stronger Colours. I am now enabled to do this, better than I was, by means of the Paper you, Sir, sent me this Week ; and wherein I found the following Extract.

L. Chronicle of July 29. 1762. Some Account of the Cherokees, as given by Lieutenant General Oglethorpe.

“ On the back of Georgia and Carolina are three “ considerable Nations, called the Cherokees, Chick- “ asaws, Creeks or Ufchesees. The Cherokees inhabit “ among the Mountains, from whence the River “ Savanna descends. These Indians are not the “ most warlike, nor of the larger Stature ; but are “ more accusom’d to labour and live upon Corn, than “ to procure their Sustenance by hunting. They “ have about five thousand Warriors or Hunters ;
 “ for the Indian Nations are divided into two “ Kinds of Men : those whom they call Warriors “ or Hunters, are like the antient Gentlemen in “ Europe, whose single Profession was Arms and “ the Chase.”

“ These Indians look upon the End of Life to be “ living happily. For this Purpose their whole Cus“ toms are calculated to prevent Avarice ; which “ they say embitters Life ; and nothing is a severer “ Reflexion among them, than to say that a Man

^f Ἡκιστα ἐν τοῖς συμβολαίοις ἢ τῷ ἀργυρισμῷ ζῶντας. Lib. 7.
 pag. 300.

“ loves his own. To prevent the Rise and Propa“ gation of such a Vice, they, upon the Death of “ any Indian, burn all that belongs to the deceased, “ that there may be no Temptation to the Parent “ to hoard up a Superfluity of Arms and domestic “ Conveniencies, their chief Treasures, for their child“ ren. They strengthen this Custom by a Super“ stition, that it is agreeable to the Souls of the de“ ceased to burn all they leave, and that Afflictions “ follow them who use any of their Goods. They “ cultivate no more Land, than is necessary for “ their plentiful Subsistence, and Hospitality to “ Strangers. They use neither Horses nor Plows
 “ in Agriculture, but instead of ploughing or dig“ ging hoe their Fields by common Labour. The rest “ of the Year they spend in hunting; and when “ they are injured by any other Nation, as sup“ posing one of their own Nation to be killed, they “ send to demand Satisfaction; but if this is refused, “ they make Reprisals upon the first they can take “ of the Nation that committed the Injury. Thus “ their Wars begin, which are very frequent, and “ carried on with great Rage; there not being any “ People in the World braver, or more dexterous in “ the Use of their Arms, and Manner of fighting “ among Woods and Mountains; none more pa“ tient of labour, or swifter on foot.”

You see, Sir, that Mr. Oglethorp has described the Manners of the Cherokees in very peculiar and expressive Terms, and assigned to them sundry Ways, that are divers from those of the generality of Mankind: And yet, I must observe that most of these, almost necessarily, result from the first Note I laid down for distinguishing the Sons of Me- shek, and are the natural Consequences of their being Scythians. For their strolling and unsettled Life, as before hinted, put them all on the same Level, in a State of Equality and Independence; consequently [1] they had no King, as Arrian^g says of the Sanni or Macrones; and is equally true of the Cherokees: their Chief being, as the King of the Mossynæi seems to have been, occasionally chosen, and upon a Dislike again set aside; whom A. Marcellinus^h more properly styles Judex a Judge, and tells us that he was the Chief Warrior, he who was of the most approved Experience in War. [2] They had all Things in common: just as the Cherokees are said to cultivate their Lands by common Labour, and the Mossynæci to have had a general Magazine or Store-House of Corn, κοινὸν ὄν, for the publick Use. Some of them, I confess, carried this Principle a little too far, even to a Community of Wives; and then it followed, that all the Children were equally esteemed the Children of the Public. [3] They had no private Property; the Scythian had nothing of his own, but his Sword and his Cup or Platter, Strabo p. 300. and the chief Treasures of the Cherokees are their Arms and domestic Conveniencies. [4] There was no Room for Avarice; and the Scythian of all Men living was the least anxious about making a Purse,ⁱ or least tempted to embitter his Life, and disquiet himself in heaping Riches, for which he had no Use. [5] Free from such Cares he is gay and debonnaire; and view him

^g Ἐθνὸς ἀσπίλευτον. Peripl. p. 11. So Mr. Grotius says of the North Americans, deinde quòd ex iis plurimi sine communi Imperio vixerint, Cyclopium more, ut nunc quoque fit in Floridâ; cui consequens fuit, ut singulæ Familiæ propria sibi finxerint Vocabula. p. 11.

^h Servitus quid sit ignorabant, omnes generoso Sanguine procreati. Judicesque etiam nunc eligunt, diuturno bellandi usu spectatos. Lib. 31. cap. 2. He speaks of the Alani, who lived in Carts.

ⁱ See Note f.

alone in his Hutt, you will find him talking to himself, and laughing and dancing, Xenophon p. 393. or read his Character, given by other antient Authors, and He is the Man, who places his whole Happiness in Sport and Merriment; or, in the General's Words, who looks upon the End of Life to be living happily^k — These Manners, as they are opposite to the usual Practice of Mankind, so are they natural to a Scythian; and therefore I venture to appropriate them wholly to Meshek's Sons; deducing them from the first and most obvious Characteristic of his Family, from their dwelling in Tents and flitting from Place to Place.

This Clan of Scythians, though they agree in many Respects with their Brethren, the wandering Scythians, yet differ in others, and are easily distinguish'd. [6] They are all hasty and quick of Resentment, and brave in War; so that they are often quarelling with their Neighbours, and then again making Peace;^l it is no wonder therefore that Wars are frequent among them. But [7] the former are Men of the strictest Honour, and never commence Hostilities, till they have previously declared War, and appointed the Place, Day and Hour of Battle:^m and the Cherokees, when they are ^k Tibareni — quibus in risu lusuque summum Bonum est. Pomponius M. cited by Mr Bochart p. l. 3. c. 12. as is Ephorus to the same Purpose. They both relate this of the Tibareni; but the most learned Dr. Hutchinson justly suspects that they mistake them for the Mossynæci. Dissert. Cyro minori præfixa p. 16. as I suppose the Scholiast on Apollonius doth also in Note m.

^l Τοῖστος δὲ καὶ ὁ ἄλλων Νομάδων βίος, αἰ τοῖς πλησίον ἐπιπρη-μῶν, τότε αὖ ἀλαλαττομένων. Strabo L. 11. p. 511.

^m Τίβορηνοί, ἔθνος Σκυθίας, the Dwellers in Tents, δικαιοτάτοι λέγονται, καὶ ὅδε ποτε μάχην πρὶ συνέλαβον, εἰ μὴ πρῶτον καταγγείλαιον καὶ ἡμέραν καὶ τόπον καὶ ὥραν τῇ μάχης. Schol. in Apollonius R. l. 2. v. 1012.

injured, first send to demand Satisfaction. [8] These Indians, says Mr. Oglethorpe, are not the most war-like; and it is true, that herein all the Sons of Meshek were ever outdone by the Thracians the Sons of Tiras, who lived by the Sword. [9] They are more accustom'd to labour and live upon Corn; which is another remarkable Note of Difference between the Scythian, that dwelt in Tents, and the wandering Scythian, as Strabo and Arrian make it to be; ⁿ the former calling him a Husbandman, and the latter one that lived upon Corn, in direct opposition to the latter. But others of them were Graziers and Herdsmen, as the Bechires and Sanni were at Pontus, and the Cowkeepers Gang are now among the Creeks; and they all fall under that Part of Meshek's Family, who dwelt in Tents, however they may vary from each other in certain Particulars.

Here, Sir, I stop; having now tired you, I suppose, with the unentertaining and obsolete Fashions of Antiquity, and a Heap of learned Quotations; which the Comparison I undertook to draw between the Cherokees and the ancient Descendents of Meshek, constrained me to set before you. It is now left to your and my Readers Judgment, whether a Family-Likeness be not discernible in both; i. e. whether what I have said makes it probable, according to the former Part of my Assertion, that ⁿ Οἱ μὲν Νομάδες, οἱ δὲ καὶ Σκηνίται καὶ Γεωργοί. Herodotus L. 4. & Strabo L. 11. p. 492. Arrian, as he is quoted by Eustathius in his Notes on Dionysius v. 669. says the Scythians, before they became Nomades Strollers, were σποράγιοι καὶ ἀγορήγιοι, i. e. מושבי הזרע Amos 9. 13. Sowers of Seed, led thereto perhaps from another sense of their Father's Name מושב traba, a Hopper or Seed-Basket, which the Sower carries before him, when he sows the Corn. Hence they gave out that the Plow and the Yoke also dropped down from Heaven to them.

the Cherokee is a Descendent of Meshek. I own myself still indebted to you for something more; i. e. to make good the latter Part, and to prove the Cherokee's Relation to the antient Britons; but too much hath been already said, if I have miscarried in my first Attempt: nor is it of great Importance, if I have.

The Point I am most concern'd for is this, That no Conclusion may be hastily drawn in Prejudice to the Rule laid down, for descrying and ascertaining the Manners of each Family, from the ill Use I may be found to have made of it; being assured as I am, that a close Attention to the several Senses of the Family-Name, is the Rule, which Scripture gives us, for tracing out the Manners of that Family — The Rule, which Jacob observed, in foretelling to his Sons, what should befall them in the last Days, Gen. 49. 1. and which will enable the learned Enquirer — to give a more precise and accurate Account of the first Dispersion of Mankind, than hath hitherto been offered — to explain the several Customs and Manners of each People, and thereby — to account for sundry Peculiarities, seemingly absurd and extravagant, which have not yet been well accounted for — to range the several Branches of each Family, however diversified, under their proper Head; and, what I have principally in view, in doing this — to do Honour to the Holy Scriptures. Since if it be found, as I presume it may, that Moses, in recording the Names of the Patriarchs Gen. 10. has assign'd a Name to each, which is expressive and declaratory of the Manners of the Descendents, there will arise a Proof of the Authenticity of those sacred Oracles, which hath not yet been considered or evinced.

Thus I account to you, Sir, for my Application of this Rule in tracing out the Origin of the Chero- kees, one of the American Nations; a Subject which the celebrated Grotius judg'd not unworthy of his Consideration, nor unuseful to the then present and future Ages; and which, if pursued by this or some other better Rule [as we may now hope it will] may give us a more satisfactory History of these Nations, than we have hitherto received. But this may not be all. The 38th and 39th Chapters of Ezekiel contain a Prophecy, not yet fulfilled; and which may be brought to pass, in God's due time, by them. This I mention with the profoundest Reverence and Modesty. But, whereas the northern Parts v. 15. from which this Storm will arise, will suit the northern Parts of America, as well as of Europe; and Gog of the Land of Magog, i. e. Tartary [the Mogul Tartars being at this Day called Magog by the Arabian Writers] will mean those Sons of Magog, who out of Tartary passed into America through the Streights of Anien; and returning back into Europe the same Way, may one Day league themselves with their Brethren in Europe under the Banner of the Turk. — Whereas also the six^d o The London Chronicle of Aug. 28. informs us, “ That a very curious Book has been lately publish'd in the German Language by an ingenious Author, whose Name is Kraft, “ Concerning the principal Institutions Customs and Opinions of “ the savage Nations.

p Gog or Magog the Prince of Ras, i. e. Tiras I suppose [his Children being called, I presume, the Children of Rass Jud. 2. 23.] Meshek, Tubal, Gomer and Togarmah. These are the Families of the northern Parts. And though Persia [by which I understand not Elam, which is Persia strictly so called, but פֶּרֶס מִדְיָה, ἡ ἀνωτέρα τῶν Ἑλλάδων, that Medley of People, which under the Persian Kings compos'd the District of Pars; just as in Scripture the Word עֲרַבִּים the Arabians means the mix'd Families of Ismael's and Keturah's Sons] Cush and Phut, the wandering African be mention'd with these, yet I believe these last are the Inhabitants of South America; among some of whom, who perhaps are some of Abraham's Descendents by Ismael or Keturah, the Rite of Circumcision is still preserved.

Sons

Sons of Japhet, whom the Prophet mentions, were always Neighbours, and most probably will be found the Families, of which the American Nations of the North now consist. — Whereas Gog their Chief, and his Sons are the fierce and rebellious Titans, who of old obstinately withstood the Will of Heaven; and the Americans seem not much disposed to embrace the Gospel of Christ, notwithstanding the many Opportunities they have had of so doing near 200 Years. — Whereas, lastly, Dominion or Empire, which we can easily trace from its first Rise in the East, in it's Progress through Asia into Europe; and there never continuing in one Stay, but creeping forwards towards the North, will probably go on shifting its Place of Residence, till, having settled on every European Nation in it's turn, it will pass over into America, and there be finally concluded. — On these Premises, I trust, it will not appear irreverent or immodest in me, as it will also shew the Use of such Enquiries, and the Interest we have therein, to propose, and leave to your and my Reader's Consideration, the following Questions,

Whether the present Nations of North America may not in fact consist of those Families, which are expressly mentioned by Ezekiel? And,

Whether their Prince and Leader may not one Day unite and gather them together, to set at Defiance their present European Masters; to wrest the Dominion out of their Hands, and in their turn [for so the Prophet's Words v. 12. will mean] TO SPOIL THE SPOILERS AND TO PLUNDER THE PLUNDERERS.

I am,

Sir, with all due Respect, Your's, &c.

Page 15. line 2. insert the following Note. Συθισὶ χειρόμακτρον ἐκκεκαρμένος [viz. φορεῖ, or some such Word, understood] Athenæus L. 9. ad finem. where he afterwards shews, that χειρόμακτρον means sometimes a Covering or Ornament of the Head.

D762
E611

64-11.7
Jan 64
Maggie